Can you imagine something the size of Bangkok's MBK* building raised hundreds of metres into the air on concrete legs? Can you imagine this huge thing moving hundreds of kilometers? Norway's gigantic gas platform, called Troll, is surely one of the wonders of the world. It was made to stand in water 300 metres deep and stay for at least 50 years in the North Sea near Norway, which has some of the strongest winds and biggest waves of any sea in the world. Under the bottom of the sea where Troll will stand are about 1,300 billion cubic metres of gas that will be used all over western Europe. Gas will first be processed on the platform, after which it will be sent along a 65-km pipeline to a processing plant in Norway. Troll will get electricity from Norway instead of using its own generator as older platforms do. Even though it is so big, only 23 people will work on it full-time because it has many automatic and remote-controlled devices. Weighing 1.05 million tons and standing 472 metres high, Troll is the highest man-made object ever to move.

8. The roadrunner is about sixty centimeters in length. Half of this is its tail. Its short wings seem out of proportion to its long legs. Although the roadrunner is a bird, it runs more than it flies. As it marches across the desert, its huge tail feathers swing from side to side. Sometimes a roadrunner can be seen streaking across the road ass though it were a child wing-up car. The roadrunner is truly one of the strangest-looking birds.

9. One of the most recognizable things of the country is Statue of Liberty. However, this national landmark was not built by Americans. It was given by France to celebrate America's 100th birthday.

10. It is the most unfortunate night of Ken. He came back from his friend's birthday party around 2 o'clock. When he arrived home, he looked for the key in his pockets but there was no key. He had no choice, but to break a window and climb in. Unfortunate, while he was about to climb through the broken window, the policemen arrived on the scene. Surely, they wouldn't believe Ken's story because he was just drunk. So, they took Ken to the police station.
